WELCOME AND SPECIAL ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Welcome to the WPSA's 2014 Annual Meeting! We are delighted to have you back in Seattle, the Emerald City, especially during the beautiful month of April, when spring is in full bloom. You've already missed the cherry trees, alas, but there's more to come, we promise!

Those of you who are returning to Seattle after a long absence will notice many changes in our city, including the recent and ongoing construction of a Link Light Rail system that now connects SeaTac airport to downtown and will soon include the University of Washington and the Capitol Hill neighborhood. Along the route, especially in south Seattle, we have also seen the construction of high density and somewhat affordable housing. If you didn't take Link Light Rail from the airport, consider it for your return. There's a station conveniently located near Westlake Center in downtown Seattle. When you are above ground, look around. You'll see amazing murals on industrial buildings in the SODO district, and public artwork in the more southern stretches of the route. For more information about Link Light Rail, go to: www.soundtransit.org.

In spite of a great deal of "development" in the downtown sector and other neighborhoods, downtown Seattle retains a relatively compact footprint and remains surprisingly easy to navigate, especially on foot and by wheelchair. It is possible to sample a great deal of what Seattle has to offer without ever getting on a bus, in a cab or car. Restaurants, cafes, bistros, museums, parks, live music, incredible views, and the waterfront are all accessible on foot from our hotel, the Sheraton Seattle. You are, of course, very welcome to venture further! You'll find my suggestions for dining options and various activities in the Dining and Activities Guide at the back of this conference booklet.

Between pre-conference workshops, conferences within the conference, and enticing panels, it is sometimes difficult to break away from the conference. I urge you to make some time every day for a walk and a good long look across the Sound to the majestic Olympic Mountains. If you are very lucky, you might just spot a bald eagle or a whale or some seals or sea lions.

I would like to highlight two activities and destinations for your consideration. The Northwest African American Museum is offering a reduced admission fee of $5 to WPSA conference members. What a deal! I suggest that you coordinate with some friends, hail a taxi for the short ride to the Museum, and just do it! This museum is an exciting and relatively new venture, with creative talent at the helm. And, we have also planned a very special reception for Friday evening to honor the outgoing editors of PRQ, Cornell Clayton and Amy Mazur. On Friday, April 18, we'll be boarding The Emerald Star for a ride on the water from 9:00 pm to midnight. There will be drinks and appetizers, along with fabulous live music provided by Bluetopia. My colleague, Michael McCann, is a member of the band, and inspires me to remember that it is possible to be a first-rate academic and still have a life located elsewhere. Here is the website for the band: <http://bluetopiaband.com/>. If you would like to attend this event, we will need your reservation and a modest fee of $25. Please contact Elsa Favila <favilaej@csus.edu> for information about how to sign up.

And finally, I would like to thank my colleagues in Political Science at the University of Washington (grad students and faculty) for their generous assistance and support in compiling information for the Dining and Activities Guide. This effort most definitely took a village! Peter May, chair of our department, was upfront and generous in his early commitment to support the WPSA main reception. Huge thanks, Peter!

In the words of Ivar Haglund, a scion of early Seattle, I urge you to "Keep Clam," wherever you may be. Enjoy this wonderful conference and our beautiful city! We are very happy and honored to share the Seattle experience with you.

SPECIAL ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Throughout my year as program chair, I have witnessed the energy, vibrancy, willingness of spirit, and the dedication to advancing our shared understanding of political phenomena. It is through this lens that I wish to first thank the program committee who worked diligently to pull together a wonderful offering of scholarship and the many scholars willing to extend themselves by submitting a proposal. While the program could not accommodate all, I applaud the quality and wide expanse of paper submissions, and we owe a debt to the section chairs who pulled these offerings together.

Additionally, I wish to thank the local arrangements chair, Dr. Christine Di Stefano, whose sage leadership, wisdom, and acquisition of her own institution's resources made Seattle a welcoming home for us to meet. I thank Michael McMann and his band, Bluetopia, for volunteering to play for us at the PRQ boat cruise reception. I also want to thank the Northwest African American Museum for graciously offering discounted admission rates to the museum for WPSA conference attendees.

The Annual Meeting is just one aspect of making the WPSA a vibrant association. For this reason, my gratitude is extended to all those members willing to step up to serve on the various committees that honor and recognize the diversity of scholarship and membership that is a hallmark of this Association. Your willingness and generosity to go above and beyond when asked never ceased to hearten my belief the state of the Association is strong. I would particularly like to thank Lori Cox Han and Mark Hannah for pulling together wonderful theme panels, and the members of the WPSA Social Media Task Force for assisting in thinking of new ways to expand upon our theme and to add new dimensions to the way we interact with one another.

We would like to thank the Political Science Department at the University of Washington for its generous financial support. We would also like to thank Latino Decisions for their support with the Minority Scholars' Reception.

The health and welfare of the Association stands on such strong footing because of the many leaders that have come before and, of course, the steady hands of Executive Director Richard Clucas and the unflappable Associate Director Elsa Favila. Their dedication, attention to detail, continued commitment to improvement, and inclusive spirit make the WPSA a unique home for all scholars interested in lively discussions, a wide range of viewpoints, and outlets for collegial development.

I would be remiss without thanking the many unheralded local volunteers, the set-up crew for technology in our meeting rooms, and the many individuals and sponsors who have donated countless hours of their time, talents, and treasure. These individuals and sponsors make what we do as an association possible and, therefore, are owed a quick smile and thanks when you see them at the conference.

It has been a privilege and honor to serve in this capacity, and I do hope that what has begun here in Seattle will challenge us to spark new ideas, to build upon our traditional strengths, and to make the WPSA a “home” for which we return year after year to share our collective knowledge and renew collegial bonds so necessary to the health and vitality of the political science discipline.

Theme: The Politics of People in Motion

Our visit to Las Vegas in 2015 presents the opportunity to consider the multiple consequences of human movement on politics, the society, inter-group relations, and the environment. Growing from a population of 25 in 1900, Las Vegas today is home to nearly 600,000 and to nearly 2 million in the region. Many millions more visit from throughout the world each year. Although Las Vegas' growth is certainly more rapid than many other cities or regions, the growth and change of the Las Vegas region reflects the increasing norm in modern society of people in motion. Politics and society certainly spur much of this movement, but they also have to respond to it and in that response, arguably, are central components of the changing face of the next century's politics. As political scientists and, more generally, social scientists, we are in a unique position to assess the dynamics of this change, how it affects different parts of society and politics, and what its long-term consequences will be for political identities, political organization, and political institutions.

The 2015 theme directs our attention to how mass participation, identities, mediating institutions, and governing institutions shape and respond to the movement of peoples, ideas, and practices. Needless to say, this movement takes many forms, whether from town to city or across international frontiers. The movement can be for a visit or for a lifetime. Does this movement recast our understandings of our place in society or of more fundamental questions of who we are? How do our understandings of ourselves and our political selves change with movement? How do we maintain our former political and social networks and how do we create new ones? Does our change of place allow us to build new connections across race, class, gender, or sexual orientation that will change the meanings or functioning of politics? How do social and political institutions respond to the movement of peoples and the movement of ideas? How do political institutions seek to regulate movement and what are consequences of these efforts at regulation? How does the regulation, or absence of regulation, of the human impact on the natural environment push the movement of peoples? What are the consequences of their movement to the environments of their destinations? We invite you to move across the boundaries of the discipline to think critically about the meanings of movement to politics and to test those boundaries with theoretically and empirically rich assessments of the dynamics of the political world of the 21st Century.

Please join us at the 2015 Western Political Science Association Annual Meeting in Las Vegas and add not just to the movement of people throughout the globe, but more importantly to the movement of ideas and to our collective opportunity to build new and enduring networks.

Note: All participants in the program are required to preregister for the meeting by early December.

Before We Explore the Fun Stuff: Do You Need to Get Some Work Done?

Head over to the Seattle Public Library (1000 4th Ave.) It's also worth seeing. Principal designers of the central library were Dutch architect Rem Koolhaas and Seattle native Joshua Ramus. The central library opens every day at 10:00 am, except for Sunday, when it opens at 12:00 noon. The library closes at 8:00 pm on most evenings, except for Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, when it closes at 6:00 p.m. You can thank neo-liberalism for these pinched hours of operation. 206-386-4636.

And now for the fun stuff:

RESTAURANTS, CAFES, BISTROS AND BARS

DOWNTOWN AND CLOSE TO THE SHERATON SEATTLE HOTEL:

Pike Place Market (1st Ave and Pike St) is the obligatory tourist destination. It's home to the world's first Starbucks, Beecher's cheese (you can watch them make it), and fish vendors, plus local farmers' market produce, and arts & crafts. There are great food stands and restaurants all up and down the market, including:

- Le Panier (1902 Pike Place). French café/bakery adored by many. www.lepanier.com/
- Maximilien (81 Pike St) is romantic, with great food and great views. A bit pricey but worth it. 206-682-7271. www.maximilienrestaurant.com/
- You'll find Il Bistro (93 A Pike St) under the Market. It is old-world Italian, with contemporary touches. A bit pricey, but an elegant place with great food, drinks, wine list. 206-682-3049. 5:00 pm-2:00 am. www.ilbistro.net

- Lowell's (1519 Pike Place): Order at the counter on the first floor. There are lots of fish options. Then go find a seat on the 3rd floor for great views of Elliot Bay in a casual dining experience. Lunch at Lowell's is great!
